Gabriela's Story

Gabriela was born in Los Angeles in 1954. Her parents were Mexican immigrants who worked hard to provide a better life for their family.

Gabriela grew up in a loving home, and she was always encouraged to pursue her dreams.

When Gabriela was in elementary school, she began to notice that her community was being treated unfairly. The schools were overcrowded, and the teachers were not very good. Gabriela also saw that many of her neighbors were living in poverty.

Gabriela was angry about the injustice that she saw, and she wanted to do something to help. She decided to join the United Farm Workers, a union that was fighting for the rights of farm workers. Gabriela worked with the union to organize protests and marches, and she spoke out against the unfair treatment of farm workers.

Gabriela's work with the United Farm Workers was dangerous, but she was not afraid. She believed that she was fighting for a just cause, and she was determined to make a difference.

Gabriela's work with the United Farm Workers eventually led to the passage of the Agricultural Labor Relations Act of 1975. This law gave farm workers the right to organize unions and bargain for better wages and working conditions.
