The novel delves into the complexities of the Batista regime, the rise of Fidel Castro, and the subsequent divisions and conflicts that tore the country apart.

The Intertwining Stories of Three Women

At the center of the novel are the compelling stories of three women: Elizabeth "Eliza" Perez, a wealthy Cuban-American woman disillusioned by the revolution; Beatriz Perez, her rebellious younger sister who joins the fight against the Batista dictatorship; and Marisol Ferrera, a young woman struggling to find her place in a rapidly changing society.
